

LSFS17 25.5.89 [NAME OF SCHOOL] Interviewed at Dalmeny Road

Slim and pretty, blonde shoulder-length hair tied at back of neck. Wearing jeans and a black t-shirt. I picked her up [REDACTED] in NORTH LONDON after she had been to the dentist in CAMDEN. She was quite self assured, mature and chatty. She's doing Sociology at A-level and hopes to go on and take it at university. Her sociology teacher encouraged her to be interviewed as good research experience for her! She said afterwards that her mother was far more nervous about the prospect of her having to answer questions about sexual behaviour than she was herself.

Her mother has [CHRONIC ILLNESS], although she still manages to do her job as [CARING PROFESSION] to some extent and take a [THERAPEUTIC PROFESSION] course. She talked quite easily about everything but got a bit embarrassed when I brought up the subject of masturbation, she said it was a bit of a taboo subject amongst her friends although they did talk about sex in general. She is a very sensible person, not into taking risks. She's on the Pill for her first sexual relationship. She and her boyfriend had been going out about five months before they decided to have sex and she said it had evolved. It is also his first sexual relationship. At present they've been going out for about eighteen months but they are not getting on as well as they did anymore.

Education is very important to her, and going on to university. If this relationship ends, she doesn't want to rush into another long-term or sexual relationship. Doesn't want to marry or have kids although she would consider living with someone.

She is willing to do a follow-up interview but not write a diary.
