Asian girl with shoulder-length black hair, wearing rather conservative navy blue clothes that I think were possibly school uniform? Was quite shy and reserved although fairly confident. She has a group of girlfriends that she goes around with, they talk about lots of things, although it sounds as though they discuss issues like marriage and abortion, but not actual sexual feelings or practice or any of the nitty gritty intimate things. These friends are very important to her. They had sex educ. in biology and also in something called PSE - Personal and Social Education - which was supposed to be more about feelings etc. but she says this has been stopped now after some girl wrote to a newspaper complaining about what they were taught in it etc. Does not seem to have learned all that much about sex ed. at school - or anywhere else? Doesn't have very much knowledge about AIDS and tends not to think it is very relevant to her situation. She has not ever had a boyfriend but she does say that she would have a sexual relationship before marriage if she felt that the relationship was close enough, Her older sister, who is 24 and a [FINANCIAL ROLE] is getting married soon. She herself wants to do a course in accountancy when she leaves school.
